Armour & Co. Will Test the Wireless System.

Chicago, March 8.—It is stated that Arnour & Co, have arranged for a test of the wireless telegraph as applied to communications between the cities where they have packing-houses and important offices. They now maintain leased telegraph wires west to Kansas City. St. Louis. Omaha and sloux City and east to Allegheny, Philadelhia, New York and Boston.

After preliminary experiments between the Chicago stock yards and the company's offices downtown, the plant will be installed, if the first experiment shall prove successful, to test the system between Chicago and une of the four Western cities.

Officials of the company estimate that if the wireless system can be successfully worked between important cities in which the company maintains its largest offices an annual saving of at least 190,000 yould be freeted.

Nashville Millionaire Loses Suit for $50,000 Against President Roosevelt's Friend.

BEGAN CAREER AS OFFICE BOY.

Claimed That Profits of Land Company Were Withheld From Him by Banker Geo. S. Edgell —Court Rejected Claim.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

New York, March 8.-After years of litigation Thomas J. Feldner, who began life as Austin Corbin's office boy, and who is now a man worth millions, of Nashville, Tenn., has lost his suit for $50,000, which he claimed as his alleged share of the profits of the land department of the Corbin Banking Company.

Interwoven with the details of Mr. Feldper's suit is a romance of love and fortune This Georgia boy obtained the confidence of Austin Corbin, won the daughter of Mil on H. Smith, president of the Louisville and Nashville Railway, although a rival shot himself in the young woman's pres-ence, and finally Mr. Feldner and his bride secame the adopted children of Samuel M Murphy, known as the surface rallway king of Tennessee. Mr. Murphy left them a forune of from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000.

Mr. Feldner's claim was that Austin Corment with him, by which he was to have one-haif of the profits of the land depart-ment of the company. He was unable to produce this agreement, but alleged that it had been taken, with other papers, from his desk by George S. Edgell, one of the sur-viving members of the firm. Mr. Edgell is well known in banking cir-desk by George S. Edgell, one of the surviving members of the firm.

Mr. Edgell is well known in banking circles, and had President Roosevelt as his guest at Newport, N. H., last fall, where the preserves of the Corbin estate are located. Mr. Edgell denied taking Mr. Feldner's papers, and the onus of proving the existence of the partnership agreement being on Mr. Feldner's shoulders, the United States Court decided against him.

Austin Corbin took a liking to Thomas J. Feldner when he was a boy in the Atlanta branch office of the banking company. Mr. Corbin brough, him to this city when he was 21 years old and put him in charge of the land department at a salary of $3.000 a year. Mr. Corbin died in June, 1806, and later in the same year Mr. Feldner presented a claim for half the profits of the land department up to that time.

When this claim was made Feldner was discharged. In January, 187, he brought suit in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Georgia against George S. Edgell as one of the surviving members of the banking company.

As the corporation had assets amounting in value to more than $1.000,000 in Georgia, his action threw the property in that State into the hands of a receiver for a time.

The case was finally argued and submitted to Judge Emory Speer in July, 1901. His decision has just been rendered. The costs will amount, it is said, to about $15,000.

Mr. Feldner's marriage, in 1888 to Miss Nettle Bell Smith, a daughter of Milton H. Smith, followed clossely upon Wm. Preston Thornton's attempted suicide. Thornton had been engaged to Miss Smith. When he received a note from her declining to keep an appointment, he went to her home and shot himself in Miss Smith, a daughter of Milton H. Smith, followed clossely upon Wm. strongly of coming out on an independent ticket.

The Republicans have not overcome the party strife which prevailed at the recent election. Certain candidates for the House threaten to come out independently if they are defeated at the primaries, and this unsettled state of affairs is not altogether pleasing to Republican leaders.

The Democratic Convention to nominate a ticket for the City Council will be held on Wednesday. The date originally set was Thursday, but was changed in order to give all Democratic who desired an opportunity to aftend the State bond burning jubilee at Jefferson City on Thursday. The Jefferson Chub will sind a large delegation, and those who desire to attend should consult the secretary of the cipib.

seems to meet with general approval, and opposition in no form is anticipated by the party leaders. It is said that some of the party leaders. It is said that some of the prominent Republicans of the city have spoken favorably of the ticket.

While the Republican Convention to nominate a Council ticket is to be held Thursday, no apparent effort is being made to securg men to consent to become candidates. As stated in The Republic yesterday, there appears to be a feeling of distrust among the Republicans, growing out of the party division at the November election and primaries preceding the election, and for that reason prominent Republicans who would like to enter the race are lacking in courage to make the attempt.

Republican leaders who have been asked regarding candidates for the Council will not discuss probable candidates and decime to predict what might be done at the convention.

Robards Plant Destroyed at Hendersonville, Ky.-Loss $100,000.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Hendersonville, Ky., March 8.—The plant of the Robards Tobacco Company was burned at an early hour this morning. The plant was valued at $75,000 and the stock of a half million pounds of tobacco was valued at $25,000. About $50,000 insurance was carried on plant and stock.

An all-night rain prevented the fire from spreading, and only one residence, valued at $1,000, was destroyed, and another sightly damaged by falling walls.

The factory will be rebuilt. The fire is believed to have originated from a quantity of lime, which had become wet from the heavy rain.

WILL INVESTIGATE CAUSE OF CRUCIBLE EXPLOSION.

Inquest May Determine Origin of Accident Which Resulted in John Hennessy's Death.

Coroner Funkhouser will to-day conducan investigation into the death of John Hennessy, who was killed Saturday night by the explosion of a crucible of molten metal at the Federal Lead Company's plan in Cheltenham. An attempt will be made to learn the cause of the explosion. The accident is believed to have been due to the breaking of a jacket which controlled a tank of water above the crucible, which allowed cold water to dip into the crucible a tank of water above the crucible, which allowed cold water to dip into, the crucible. The crucible contained 7,000 pounds of moiten metal, which was being prepared for the night run. The contact of the cold water with this fiery mass generated a vast quantity of steam and gas, which, unable to escape, caused the explosion.

The huge crucible was rent assunder with a force which shook houses in the neighborhood and was heard a mile away. Portions of it were hurled in every direction, damaging the walls of the plant.

Hennessy, who was a "ladle" man, and a laborer named James A. Termant, were the only workmen near the crucible when it burst. Hennessy was knocked down by a piece of the flying debris and buried under it, while the white-hot metal, escaping from the ruined crucible, trickled through the debris and about the unfortunate man, burning him terribly.

Termant escaped with a badly lacerated scalp. As soon as he recovered from the shock he set about rescuing Hennessy, assisted by Patrolmen Hussey and Miller of the Mounted District, who had been attracted by the explosion. The debris was pulled from Hennessy, and he was carried to the office of Doctor Murrell, No. 574 Manchester avenue, who pronounced him dead, and the body was removed to the morgue.
